

BODYWARP

A solo exhibition by Indira Allegra

Warp is the vertical thread held under tension on a loom, making the act of weaving possible. BODYWARP, is a solo exhibition by Indira Allegra at The Alice Gallery, exploring weaving as performance requiring a unique receptivity to tensions extant in political and emotional spaces. BODYWARP marks the launch of a multi-year exploration - of looms as frames through which the weaver becomes the warp and is held under tension, performing a series of site-specific interventions using her body. Like the accumulation of memory in cloth, in BODYWARP, looms and other tools of the weaver's craft become organs of memory, pulling the artist's body into an intimate choreography between maker, tool and the narrative of a place.
